[ORIGIN from MAGNET, MAGNETIC, MAGNETISM: see -O-.]
Forming words designating processes, devices, phenomena, etc., involving (the use of) magnetism.
■ magneto'caloric adjective designating or pertaining to the reversible change of temperature that accompanies a change in the magnetization of a paramagnetic or ferromagnetic material E20. magneto'cardiogram noun (MEDICINE) a chart or record produced by a magnetocardiograph M20. magneto'cardiograph noun (MEDICINE) an instrument that records or displays the variations in the body's magnetic field resulting from the activity of the heart M20. magnetocardio'graphic adjective (MEDICINE) involving or pertaining to magnetocardiography L20. magneto-cardi'ography noun (MEDICINE) the practice or technique of using a magnetocardiograph or magnetocardiograms M20. magneto'chemical adjective of or pertaining to magnetochemistry E20. magneto'chemistry noun the branch of science that deals with the interrelation of magnetism and chemical phenomena, structure, etc. E20. magnetograph noun a recording magnetometer M19. magneto'graphic adjective of or pertaining to a magnetograph L19. magneto-i'onic adjective of or pertaining to the joint effect of a magnetic field and ionized gas (e.g. in the ionosphere) on the propagation of radio waves E20. magneto-me'chanical adjective pertaining to the interrelation of magnetic and mechanical properties; spec. = MAGNETOGYRIC 2: E20. magneto-'optical adjective of or pertaining to magneto-optics M19. magneto-'optics noun the branch of physics that deals with the optical effects of magnetic fields E20. magnetopause noun the outer limit of a magnetosphere M20. magnetore'sistance noun dependence of the electrical resistance of a body on an external magnetic field M20. magnetore'sistive adjective relating to or exhibiting magnetoresistance M20. magnetosphere noun the region (not necessarily spherical) surrounding the earth or another astronomical body in which its magnetic field is effective and prevails over other magnetic fields M20. magneto'spheric adjective of or pertaining to a magnetosphere M20. magneto'static adjective of or pertaining to an unchanging magnetic field L19. magneto'statics noun the branch of physics that deals with unchanging magnetic fields L19. magneto'striction noun a dependence of the state of strain of a body (and hence its dimensions) on its state of magnetization L19. magneto'strictive adjective of, exhibiting, or using magnetostriction E20. magnetotail noun the broad elongated extension of the earth's magnetosphere on the side away from the sun L20. magnetote'lluric adjective pertaining to or designating a technique for investigating the electrical conductivity of the earth by measuring simultaneously fluctuations in its magnetic and electric fields at the surface M20. magnetote'llurics noun the branch of geophysics that deals with magnetotelluric investigation M20.

magneto-electric /mag,ni:təʊɪ'lektrɪk/ adjective. M19.
[ORIGIN from MAGNETO- + ELECTRIC.]
Of, pertaining to, or involving electric currents induced in a conducting material by its motion in a magnetic field.
magneto-electric machine hist. = MAGNETO.
■ magneto-electrical adjective magneto-electric L18. magneto-elec'tricity noun electricity generated by the movement of electrical conductors in a magnetic field M19.

magnetogyric /mag,ni:tə(ʊ)'dʒaɪrɪk/ adjective. E20.
[ORIGIN from MAGNETO- + Greek gyros ring, circle + -IC.]
PHYSICS. 1 Pertaining to or exhibiting the Faraday effect. E20.
2 Designating the ratio of the magnetic moment of an atom or particle to its angular momentum. M20.

magnetohydrodynamic /mag,ni:təʊhaɪdrə(ʊ)daɪ'namɪk/ adjective. M20.
[ORIGIN from MAGNETO- + HYDRO- + DYNAMIC.]
Of, pertaining to, or involving an electrically conducting fluid (as a plasma or molten metal) acted on by a magnetic field; hydromagnetic.
■ magnetohydrodynamical adjective M20. magnetohydrodynamics noun the branch of physics that deals with magnetohydrodynamic phenomena (also called hydromagnetics) M20.

magnetoid /mag'ni:tɔɪd/ adjective & noun. M19.
[ORIGIN from MAGNET + -OID.]
▸A adjective. Having properties like those of a magnet. rare. M19.
▸B noun. A magnetoid body; spec. (ASTRONOMY) a massive rotating body of magnetized plasma, postulated to account for the energy emission of quasars. M20.

magnetometer /magnɪ'tɒmɪtə/ noun. E19.
[ORIGIN from MAGNETO- + -METER.]
An instrument for measuring magnetic forces, esp. the strength of terrestrial magnetism.
■ magnetometric /mag,ni:tə(ʊ)'metrɪk/ adjective of, pertaining to, or measured by a magnetometer M19. magnetometry noun L19.

magnetomotive /mag,ni:tə(ʊ)'məʊtɪv/ adjective. L19.
[ORIGIN from MAGNETO- after electromotive.]
Pertaining to or producing magnetic flux.
magnetomotive force a scalar quantity representing the line integral of the magnetic field intensity around a closed line.

magneton /'magnɪtɒn/ noun. E20.
[ORIGIN from MAGNETIC adjective + -ON.]
PHYSICS. Any of several units of magnetic moment (see below).
Bohr magneton a unit equal to $eh/4\pi m$ (where e and m are the charge and mass of the electron, and h is Planck's constant, in SI units), i.e. about 9.27×10^{-24} joule per tesla. nuclear magneton a unit of nuclear magnetic moment, analogous to the Bohr magneton with the mass of the proton replacing that of the electron, equal to about 5.05×10^{-27} joule per tesla.

magnetophone /mag'ni:tə(ʊ)fəʊn/ noun. In sense 3 also in German form -phon /-fɒn/. L19.
[ORIGIN from MAGNETO- + -PHONE.]
†1 An instrument for producing musical tones by means of a perforated disc that is rotated between a magnet and an induction coil connected to a telephone receiver. Only in L19.
2 An early form of moving-coil microphone. E20.
3 A tape recorder (chiefly with ref. to early German machines). M20.

magnetron /'magnɪtrɒn/ noun. E20.
[ORIGIN from MAGNETIC adjective + -TRON.]
ELECTRONICS. A diode with a cylindrical anode surrounding a coaxial cathode in which the current is controlled by a magnetic field applied parallel to the axis, now usu. designed to produce microwave pulses of high power.

magnific /mag'nɪfɪk/ adjective. arch. L15.
[ORIGIN Old French & mod. French magnifique or Latin magnificus, from magnus great: see -FIC.]
†1 Renowned, glorious. L15–M17.
2 Sumptuous, splendid. L15.
3 Imposing by vastness or dignity; (of language etc.) exalted, sublime; derog. pompous, grandiloquent. M16.
†4 Of a title, expression, etc.: serving to magnify or extol; highly honorific or eulogistic. M16–E18.
†5 Nobly lavish or munificent. L16–M17.

magnifical /mag'nɪfɪk(ə)l/ adjective. arch. M16.
[ORIGIN formed as MAGNIFIC + -AL[1].]
†1 = MAGNIFIC 1. M–L16.
2 = MAGNIFIC 2. M16.
3 Exalted, sublime; honorific, eulogistic. M16.
†4 = MAGNIFIC 5. L16–E17.

magnifically /mag'nɪfɪk(ə)li/ adverb. arch. M16.
[ORIGIN from MAGNIFIC or MAGNIFICAL: see -ICALLY.]
Magnificently, splendidly; in eulogistic terms.

magnificat /mag'nɪfɪkat/ noun. OE.
[ORIGIN Latin, 2nd person sing. pres. indic. of magnificare MAGNIFY: see below.]
1 (M-.) A canticle forming part of the Christian liturgy at evensong and vespers, and comprising the hymn of the Virgin Mary in Luke 1:46–55 (in the Vulgate beginning Magnificat anima mea Dominum). Also, the music to which this is set. OE.
2 transf. A song of praise; a paean. E17.

magnification /,magnɪfɪ'keɪʃ(ə)n/ noun. LME.
[ORIGIN Partly from ecclesiastical Latin magnificatio(n-), from Latin magnificat- pa. ppl stem of magnificare MAGNIFY (see -ATION); partly directly from MAGNIFY (see -FICATION).]
1 gen. The action or an act of magnifying; the condition of being magnified; the result of magnifying. LME.

A. C. CLARKE He . . expanded the image as far as the screen magnification would allow. Which Micro? 32 sprites in two sizes and two magnifications allowing . . '3D' graphics.

2 A magnified reproduction. M19.

magnificence /mag'nɪfɪs(ə)ns/ noun. ME.
[ORIGIN Old French & mod. French, or Latin magnificentia, from magnificent-: see MAGNIFICENT, -ENCE.]
1 In Aristotelian and scholastic ethics, liberality of expenditure combined with good taste. ME.
†2 Supreme bounty or munificence. LME–M17.
†3 Glory; greatness of nature or reputation. LME–M17.
4 Sumptuousness or splendour of surroundings or adornments. Formerly also, an instance or particular display of this. LME.

G. HARRIS O-grak swirled round to display the full magnificence of his cloak.

5 Grandeur or imposing beauty of appearance. Formerly also (in pl.), features constituting this. LME.

Sunday Express The . . scene is dominated by the . . magnificence of Kilimanjaro.

6 With possess. adjective (as your magnificence etc.): a title of respect given to a monarch or other distinguished person. obsolete exc. hist. and as repr. a foreign title. LME.

magnificency /mag'nɪfɪs(ə)nsi/ noun. Long arch. M16.
[ORIGIN Latin magnificentia: see MAGNIFICENCE, -ENCY.]
1 Magnificence. M16.
2 A magnificent object, ceremony, etc. L16.

magnificent /mag'nɪfɪs(ə)nt/ adjective. LME.
[ORIGIN Old French & mod. French, or Latin magnificent- stem (in compar. and superl.) of magnificus MAGNIFIC: see -ENT.]
1 Of an abstract thing: exalted, sublime. LME.

W. COWPER The song magnificent—the theme a worm!

2 Characterized by greatness of achievement or by conduct befitting high position. obsolete exc. hist. in the Magnificent, used postpositively to designate a particular distinguished ruler etc. E16.
Lorenzo the Magnificent, Suleiman the Magnificent, etc.
3 Of a state of existence: characterized by grandeur or stateliness. Of a person: characterized by display of wealth and ceremonial pomp. M16.

LD MACAULAY The magnificent king who . . represented France.

4 Sumptuously constructed or decorated; imposingly beautiful, splendid. M16.

S. LEWIS Our magnificent new hotels . . and the paintings . . in their lobbies.

5 Characterized by expenditure or munificence on a grand scale. Now rare. L16.

T. FULLER Hampton Court was built by . . Cardinal Wolsey; once so magnificent in his expenses.

6 Excellent, splendid, fine. Now chiefly colloq. E18.

R. LYND A magnificent attack was beaten by a still more magnificent defence.

7 In names of animals, esp. birds: having an imposing or splendid appearance. L18.
magnificent frigate bird a very large frigate bird, Fregata magnificens, found in the tropical Atlantic and eastern Pacific. magnificent fruit dove = WOMPOO. magnificent RIFLE BIRD.
■ magnificently adverb LME.

magnifico /mag'nɪfɪkəʊ/ noun. Pl. -o(e)s. L16.
[ORIGIN Italian (adjective) = magnificent.]
A magnate (orig. a Venetian one); a grandee.

P. ZIEGLER Three rear-admirals made a respectable tally of naval magnificos.

magnify /'magnɪfaɪ/ verb. LME.
[ORIGIN Old French & mod. French magnifier or Latin magnificare, from magnificus: see MAGNIFIC, -FY.]
1 verb trans. Praise highly; glorify, extol; esp. render honour to (God). arch. LME.

AV Luke 1:46 And Marie said, My soule doth magnifie the Lord.

2 verb trans. Make greater in size, status, importance, etc.; enlarge, augment. Now rare. LME.

W. COWPER Her head, adorned with lappets . . And magnified beyond all human size.

3 verb trans. Increase the apparent size of (a thing) as with a lens or microscope. M17.

W. WITHERING When magnified they appear like ill-formed warts. JAYNE PHILLIPS Her glasses magnified her eyes.

magnifying glass (a device with) a convex lens used to increase the apparent size of an object viewed through it.
4 verb intrans. Have effect; signify. Now dial. E18.
5 verb trans. Represent (a thing) as greater than in reality; exaggerate, intensify. (Now freq. assoc. with sense 3 above.) M18.

G. GREENE Every lie I would magnify into a betrayal. R. THOMAS Isolation magnified feelings that she would have dismissed outside.

■ magnifier noun M16.

magniloquent /mag'nɪləkwənt/ adjective. M17.
[ORIGIN from Latin magniloquus (from magnus great + -loquus speaking) + -ENT.]
Lofty or ambitious in expression, grandiloquent. Also, boastful.

T. R. LOUNSBURY To describe so slight a performance in so magniloquent a manner. F. DONALDSON Psmith . . is elegant in appearance, imperturbable by nature, a magniloquent tease.

■ magniloquence noun the quality of being magniloquent E17. magniloquently adverb M19. magniloquy noun (rare) [Latin magniloquium] magniloquence M17.

magnipotent /mag'nɪpət(ə)nt/ adjective. Long rare or obsolete. L16.
[ORIGIN from Latin magnus great + POTENT adjective[2], after omnipotent.]
Possessing great power.
■ magnipotence noun M19.

magnitude /'magnɪtju:d/ noun. LME.
[ORIGIN Latin magnitudo, from magnus great, large, rel. to Greek megas and Germanic base also of MUCH: see -TUDE.]
†1 Greatness of character, rank, or position. LME–M17.
2 Great size or extent; great degree or importance. LME.

J. TYNDALL As our eye ranged over . . the mountain . . the conception of its magnitude grew. C. HAYFORD I cannot see the magnitude of the offence. J. BARZUN We can never forget the magnitude of the difficulties.

3 Size; geometrical measure or extent. LME. ▸b A quantity, an amount. L16. ▸c The intrinsic size of an earthquake or underground explosion (as distinct from its local intensity), usu. expressed by a logarithmic function of the peak seismometric deflection, adjusted for distance. M20.

D. BREWSTER The creations of the material world, whether they be of colossal or atomic magnitude.

4 ASTRONOMY. Each of a set of classes into which stars are arranged according to their brilliance, stars of the first magnitude being the most brilliant, those of the sixth barely visible to the naked eye. Now regarded as a value on a continuous scale representing the negative logarithm of the brightness, such that a decrease of one magnitude represents an increase in brightness of 2.512 times. M17.
– PHRASES: absolute magnitude: of a star as from a standard distance of 10 parsecs. apparent magnitude: of a star as seen from the earth. BOLOMETRIC magnitude. of the first magnitude: of the utmost importance. order of magnitude: see ORDER noun.

magnitudinous /magnɪ'tju:dɪnəs/ adjective. E19.
[ORIGIN from MAGNITUDE after platitudinous etc.]
Characterized by magnitude.

magnolia /mag'nəʊlɪə/ noun & adjective. M18.
[ORIGIN mod. Latin (see below), from Pierre Magnol (1638–1715), French botanist: see -IA[1].]
▸A noun. 1 Any of various usu. large Asian and N. American trees of the genus Magnolia (family Magnoliaceae), much cultivated for their showy cup-shaped flowers produced in spring before the leaves. M18.
2 The colour of some magnolia blossom, a pale pinkish white. M20.
– COMB.: Magnolia State US the state of Mississippi.
▸B adjective. Of the colour of some magnolia blossom; pale pinkish-white. M20.

magnolious /mag'nəʊlɪəs/ adjective. slang. M19.
[ORIGIN from MAGNOLIA + -OUS.]
Magnificent, splendid, large.

magnon /'magnɒn/ noun. M20.
[ORIGIN from MAGN(ETIC + -ON.]
PHYSICS. A quantum or quasiparticle associated with a spin wave in a magnetic material.

magnoperate /mag'nɒpəreɪt/ verb. rare. E17.
[ORIGIN Partly from Latin magnopere greatly (contr. of magno opere), partly from Latin magnus great + oper-, opus work, after operate: see -ATE[3].]
†1 verb trans. Make greater. Only in E17.
†2 verb intrans. Work at a magnum opus. Only in E19.
3 verb intrans. Act in a grand manner. E20.

Magnox /'magnɒks/ noun. M20.
[ORIGIN from magnesium nox oxidation.]
Any of various magnesium-based alloys containing a small proportion of aluminium, developed for the fuel containers of nuclear reactors. Freq. attrib.

M

magnum /'magnəm/ noun & adjective. L18.
[ORIGIN Latin, use as noun of neut. sing. of magnus large.]
▸A noun. 1 A bottle for wine, spirits, etc., twice the standard size, now usu. containing 1½ litres; the quantity of liquor held by such a bottle. L18.
J. GLASSCO There was a magnum of bad champagne waiting in an ice bucket.
2 (Also M-.) A Magnum revolver or cartridge (see sense B. below). M20.
3 ZOOLOGY. The section of a bird's oviduct which secretes albumen. M20.
▸B attrib. or as adjective. (Also M-.) Of a cartridge: adapted so as to be more powerful than its calibre suggests. Of a gun: designed to fire such cartridges. M20.
– NOTE: Proprietary name in the US in senses A.2, B.

magnum bonum /magnəm 'bəʊnəm, 'bɒnəm/ noun phr. E18.
[ORIGIN formed as MAGNUM + use as noun of neut. sing. of Latin bonus good.]
1 A variety of large yellow cooking plum. Also magnum bonum plum. E18. ▸b A variety of potato, or of several other fruits and vegetables. L19
†2 = MAGNUM noun 1. Scot. M–L18.
3 A large-barrelled steel pen. M19.

magnum opus /magnəm 'əʊpəs, 'ɒpəs/ noun phr. Pl. magnum opuses, magna opera /magnə 'əʊpərə, 'ɒpərə/. L18.
[ORIGIN Latin = great work.]
A great and usu. large work of art, literature, etc.; spec. the most important work of an artist, writer, etc. Cf. opus magnum S.V. OPUS noun.

Magnus effect /'magnəs ɪˌfɛkt/ noun phr. E20.
[ORIGIN Heinrich G. Magnus (1802–70), German scientist.]
The effect of rapid spinning on a cylinder or sphere moving through a fluid in a direction at an angle to the axis of spin, which results in a sideways force at right angles to both the direction of motion and the axis of spin.

Magosian /ma'gəʊsɪən/ adjective & noun. M20.
[ORIGIN from Magosi in Uganda + -AN.]
ARCHAEOLOGY. ▸A adjective. Designating or pertaining to a Stone Age culture in sub-Saharan Africa, thought to be represented by certain finds made in Uganda. M20.
▸B noun. The Magosian culture. M20.

magot /'magət, foreign mago (pl. same)/ noun. E17.
[ORIGIN French.]
1 The Barbary ape. E17.
2 A small grotesque Chinese or Japanese figurine of porcelain, ivory, wood, etc. M19.

magpie /'magpʌɪ/ noun & adjective. L16.
[ORIGIN from MAG noun[1] + PIE noun[1].]
▸A noun 1 a A common bird of the northern hemisphere, Pica pica of the crow family, with a long pointed tail, black and white plumage, and a noisy chattering call, proverbial for its habit of taking and hoarding bright objects. Also (with specifying word), any of several other long-tailed birds of the crow family. L16. ▸b More fully Australian magpie. Any of several black and white Australian birds of the butcher-bird family Cracticidae, esp. Gymnorrhina tibicen. L18.
a green magpie: of the SE Asian genus Cissa.
2 transf. An idle or impertinent chatterer; a petty pilferer; a person who collects and hoards objects, information, etc. M17.
3 Orig., an Anglican bishop (from the ceremonial episcopal costume of black chimere and white rochet). Now only, the episcopal costume consisting of these vestments. Chiefly joc. or derog. E18.
4 A fancy coloured breed of pigeon. M19.
5 A halfpenny. arch. slang. M19.
6 A shot from a rifle which strikes the outermost division but one of a target, and is signalled by a black and white flag. military slang. L19.
▸B attrib. or as adjective. Of black and white colouring; two-colour. M17.
Daily Telegraph Ermine that imparts the fashionable magpie effect.
– COMB.: magpie diver, magpie duck (a) the goldeneye, Bucephala clangula; (b) the smew, Mergus albellus; (c) the tufted duck, Aythya fuligula; magpie goose a long-legged, black and white gooselike bird, Anseranas semipalmata, of New Guinea and N. Australia; also called pied goose; magpie lark any of several Australian birds of the family Grallinidae, esp. the common black and white, stilt-legged Grallina cyanoleuca; magpie moth a white geometrid moth with black and some yellow spots, Abraxas grossulariata, whose caterpillars attack fruit bushes; magpie-robin (a) a long-tailed black and white bird of the thrush family, Copsychus saularis, of the Indian subcontinent and SE Asia; also called dial-bird; (b) either of two similar birds, Copsychus sechellarum of the Seychelles, and C. albospecularis of Madagascar.

magret /'magreɪ/ noun. L20.
[ORIGIN French (Gascon dial.), dimin. of magre lean (in standard French maigre).]
A fillet of meat cut from a duck breast.

magslip /'magslɪp/ noun. M20.
[ORIGIN App. from *mag*netic slip-ring.]
Chiefly NAUTICAL. An electric motor designed to receive and transmit data concerning the angular position of mechanical equipment by means of the position of its rotor. Cf. SELSYN, SYNCHRO.

magsman /'magzmən/ noun. slang. Pl. -men. E19.
[ORIGIN from MAG noun[2] + -'S[1] + MAN noun.]
1 A street swindler, a confidence man. E19.
2 A storyteller, a raconteur. Austral. M20.

magtig /'maxtɪx/ interjection. S. Afr. L19.
[ORIGIN Afrikaans abbreviation of allemagtig almighty.]
Expr. astonishment, awe, etc.

maguari /ma'gwɑːri/ noun. L17.
[ORIGIN Portuguese from Tupi mauári.]
More fully maguari stork. A S. American stork, Ciconia maguari, with a forked tail.

maguey /'magweɪ, foreign ma'gej/ noun. M16.
[ORIGIN Spanish from Taino.]
Any of various fleshy-leaved agaves; esp. the American aloe, Agave americana.

magus /'meɪgəs/ noun. Also M-. Pl. magi /'meɪdʒʌɪ/. ME.
[ORIGIN Latin from Greek magos from Old Persian magušˇ. Cf. MAGE.]
1 A member of an ancient Persian priestly caste (hist.); transf. a magician, a sorcerer. ME.
2 the Magi, the three Magi, the three 'wise men' from the East who brought gifts to the infant Jesus (Matthew 2:1), a representation of these. LME.

Magyar /'magjɑː/ noun & adjective. L18.
[ORIGIN Hungarian.]
▸A noun. 1 A member of a people now forming the predominant section of the inhabitants of Hungary. L18.
2 The language of this people; Hungarian. E19.
